Toni-Maree, founder and owner of elaundry, has become increasingly concerned about the well being of her clients...

"We live in an ever-increasing climate of skin allergies and sensitivities, and as a result at elaundry we've found that many of our clients are making personal health and well-being a priority, both inside and out.

Many are becoming more aware of the impact of how they choose to live their lives and the products that they use; and as society starts making these changes, they are questioning the services that they choose to use, including dry-cleaning. This is why we are putting sensitive skin, and the earth, first."
